DEAN LAWRENCE CHOSEN.

BISHOP-ELECT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

THE DIOCESAN CONVENTION AT BOSTON QUICK-LY SELECTS THE SUCCESSOR TO BISHOP PROOKS-SKETCH OF THE NEW PRELATE,

IBY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNES, Boston, May 4.—The Episcopal Convention to-day quickly, and with but little friction, disposed of the most important business before it-that of electing a successor to the late Bishop Brooks-and by its choice sicated the purpose to indorse the policy carried out On the first ballot Dr. William Lawrence led the list with 65 votes, Bishop Hare receiving 56, and Father Hall only 22. The latty on the first ballot gave Dr. Lawrence a clear majority of 72 votes. It was undoubtedly the significant attltude of the latty that caused him to be taken up by clergy on the second ballot as their choice. was evident when the first ballot was cast that the struggle lay between Dishop Hare and Dr. Lawrence, and that the chances were in favor of the latter When the decision was announced by the Chair it was suggested that the election be made unanimous, and it is to be regretted that a few partisan votes in the convention prevented Dean Lawrence's election from being unanimous. The moment that the decision was reached the whole convention expressed its feeling in an outburst of applause. "The Herald," speaking of the result, says: to a fact of intense interest throughout Massa chusetts that an honored member of one of its best native families is chosen. The Bishop-elect graduate of Harvard, a man bred in our best tra-ditions, and one who, without claiming anything for himself, has always more than met what was exknow not, but it is not impossible that Dean Lawwill surprise his friends by the development of qualities of mind and heart that only a office and its manifold duties can fashion into their best form. He is a man greatly beloved by all who know lim, one who disregards the distinctions between men, except as they are distinctions in the nature of things, and who is at once a gentleman among the gentle born, and a man of the soil smong these who stand on their manhood. He has been eminently a laymen's candidate, and he was ago named by the Bishop of New York as the man who was best entitled at this election to rethe suffrages of the churchmen of Massa-He will enter upon his work untramwelled, and yet not unknown. His administration of the Theological School at Cambridge has won for him the praises of all who are acquainted with its rapid growth and increasing influence."

Bishop-elect Lawrence is a son of Amory Lawrence, an eminent Bostonian, and was one of seven brothers nd sisters. He is forty-two years old and was born in Brookline. He entered Harvard and graduated in the class of 1871. Among his classmates were Charles J. Bonaparte, of Baltimore, now one of the Harvard Overseers; the late Edward Burgess, Professor W. E. Byerly, H. D. Chapin, Francis I. Amory, Dr. Ephraim Emerton, Dr. G. A. O. Ernst, Jabez Fox, James Russell Reed, Harvey N. Shepard, Sen stor Henry Cabot Lodge and William E. Storrs. On leaving college he prosecuted his theological studies Episcopal schools at Andover and Philadelphia. His last year was taken at the Cambridge Theological School, from which he graduated in 1876. He was appointed to the rectorship of Grace Church, which post he retained for several years. At Lawrence he was generally beloved, and when he dissolved his connection with the church to take the offered post of vice-dean and the professorship of homileties pastoral care in his alma mater, the Cambridge School, there was sincere sorrow. In 1889, on the death of Dean Grey, he became dean, retaining the professor ship mentioned above. He has conducted the institution with marked skill and ability, and it is now in a prosperous state, largely owing to his endeavors.

A NEW ASSISTANT BISHOP.

the Rev. Dr. Gallandet, W. H. H. Moore, F. N. North, H. K. Spaulding, Dr. B. Woodward, the Rev. William Van Allen and H. E. Gregory. HIS WEDDING ANNOUNCED WHEN HE DIED

THE MARRIAGE OF J. H. ELLIOT AND MISS H. A SMITH KNOWN ONLY TO INTIMATE PRIENDS. The news of the death of James H. Elliot, a lawyer of this city, was accompanied yesterday by the announcement that several years ago he married Miss Helen Ainslie Smith. The death notice and the marriage notice came to the Tribune office on one sheet of paper. The fact of the marriage was known to immediate family and a few personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Elliot, but it has never before been publicly announced.

Mr. Elliot was a coustn of S. Sidney Smith, the well-known lawyer. Mr. Smith hald last evening to a Tribune reporter who called at his home, No. 105 East Thirty-eighth-st. :

"The marriage was not really a secret one, for the families of both knew about it, and from time to time a number of their intimate friends were formed. But there were many others who really had a right to know about it in view of Mr. Elliot's death, and it was decided to make a public announce

"Mr. Elliot was born to Reene, N. H., about years ago. He was graduated from Phillips Fxeter Academy and afterward at Harvard in the class of 1864, being a classmate of Peter B. Olney and other well known men. Together with a large number of his classmates he enlisted in the 9th Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers at the outbreak of the war, and served nine months in North Carolina. He studied law in New-York, and had always practised here. He lived for many years in the University Building in Washington Square. "Just how he met Miss Smith I do not know. "Just how he met Miss Smith I do not know. I believe that he was counsel for her in a suit growing out of injuries that she received in an accident, and that a close acquaintance was thus formed which ended in their marriage. Miss Smith was a daughter of Walter Smith, of Orange, N. J. There was not a great disparity in their ages. She has always been interested in literary pursuits, and has written many articles both before and after her marriage over her madden same.

"For private reasons the narriage was not publicly announced. Mr. and Mrs. Elliot lived in an apartment at No. 485 Eighthave., where Mr. Elliot died from pneumonia to-day. Mrs. Elliot's father lived from pneumonia to-day. Mrs. Elliot's father lived with them part of the time."

The funeral will be held at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Twentieth st. and Fourth-ave., to day.

THEY WILL BE EASY ON CORNELL.

COLONEL SCOTT WILL LET HIM RESIGN FROM THE STH REGIMENT.

Colonel George P. Scott, of the 8th Regiment, it which William Alexander Cornell holds the rank of captain, seems disposed not to be as severe with his subordinate as he neight be. Although Cornell is not the man who slew Miss Berghold, he has by his own confession occupied a peculiarly contemptible and abhorrent position. It might have been supposed that Cornell would be promptly dismissed in ignoming from the command which he has disgraced. But Colonel Scott will let Cornell down so gently that he will scarcely feel the concussion. He is to have the option of honorably resigning his command before officers of the regiment have a chance to tak Here is the substance of Colonel Scott's remark in conversation with a Tribune reporter: "No; don't quite know what action the regiment will take. It would scarcely be possible to deal with the subject on what we have read in the newspapers. It is a case which I would rather handle in a pri vate and personal way. I shall take an early portunity to see Mr. Cornell in relation to the case nd he will probably see the advisability of resign ing. If he refuses to do so, why, then—."

"But you have seen his own statement and admission published over and over again. Isn't th sufficient to justify the officers of the regiment in taking action without consulting Mr. Cornell " Well, I'd rather not answer that."

"But his refusal to resign would lay him open to a trial by court-martial, would it not ! Miss Berghold was buried yesterday in the Luthera Only her parents and a few relatives an Cometery. Only her parents and a few relatives and old friends were present. On Wednesday the funera services had been held in Captain Berghold's heme. No. 148 West One-hundred-and-twenty-eighth-st. Th. Rev. SECRECY ABOUT THE ASPINWALL CASE.

DECLARING THAT A JUDGE HAS NO LEGAL RIGHT TO CONCEAL THE RECORDS.

With the assistance of Judge Patterson, in supreme Court, Mrs. Cornelia G. Aspinwall and her husband, Lloyd Aspinwall, have succeeded in sup-pressing from view records which it has been gen supposed were public documents. Judge Me Adam, of the Superior Court, and Judge Glegerich of the Court of Common Pleas, both declared vester day that the judge had no legal right to seal up such popers as these are supposed to be. howers, who is attorney for Mr. Aspinwall, declared absolutely and emphatically yesterday that the case was not one for an absolute divorce. The ques-tion was asked pointedly if it were a suit for a divorce at all, either limited or absolute, and this que efused to answer.

John M. Howers, as before said, is the attorney for Mr. Asplawall, and Joseph H. Choate represents the interests of Mrs. Asplawall. The result of an interview with Mr. Howers yesterday has been mentioned. Mr. Choate was also seen at his office, and he refused to say anything whatever about the case. It has generally been supposed that only papers in suits for absolute divorce are kept away from the public or any one who wishes to inspect them. Jehn M. Howers declares that this is not such a suit, consequently there is some curfosity as to just where the authority to conceal the papers comes from in this case and what it all means.

Justice Patterson refused yesterday to say a word about the case in any way.

THE IRISH GIRL.

WITH SOME NOTES ON MRS. WEST.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S REMINISCENCES OF FAIR HIBERNIANS-MES. CORNWALLIS WEST'S MISCHIEVOUS WAYS.

Great Indeed are the attractions which the Irish girl of gentle birth and breeding possesses, and, an Englishman born and bred as a Tory, I confess that my objections to Mr. Gladstone's so-call d separatist policy with regard to Ireland are mainly due to appre hensions least this "separatism" should tend to sever our interceurse with that pertion of the Empire most noted for the loveliness of its women. It is difficult to describe this loveliness, which does not consist in any one type of beauty. Indeed there are several types represented, and while in County Gal-way one finds girls whose complexion and features possess all the characteristics of Southern Europe, in other parts of the so-called "Sister Kingdom" the maldens are as fair complexioned as those of scandinavia. Both blendes and brunettes have, however, one feature in common with the Spanlard, namely the diminutive size and shapeliness of the foot. The latter is dainty and poetle in the extreme, and the arch of the instep, as well as the tripping lightness of the tread and the unculating grace of the walk, present a most striking contrast to the generous sized pedal extremities and penderous tread of the English Russin. Another point of recemblance of the Irish girl to the Spanlard is to be found in her fondness for vivid colors, and while this occasionally leads them to eccentricity and to what Parislennes might be tempted to pronounce as "extravagance" in the way of dress, yet on the other hand the result is not displeasing, and somehow or other it seems to add to the charms of the wearer-if that indeed were possible.

Yet another characteristic which the Irish girl has Yet another characteristic which the first get his in common with the women of southern Europe is her innate taste and love for music, which is certainly not shared by her English sister across the Channel. Her dancing can only be compared to that of the Vienness in grace and lightness, while in her facility Vienness in grace and lightness, while in her facinity for acquiring languages she resembles the Slav. She is the only member of the English-speaking race who appears to be able to get to speak French without any trace of foreign accent, and she alone of all the other non-Austrian people seems to have it in her power to acquire that soft musical drawl with which the Viennese are accustomed to endow the ordinarily harsh and guttural sounding German language. readiness to adapt berself to her surroundings, no matter what the latter may be, the daughter of Erin has much in common with the daughters of Columbia, and next to an American girl there is no woman wh so well fitted in every way to become the better half of a diplomat than an Irish maiden.

In her impatience, that most feminine of all faults as well as in her unpunctuality, she is thoroughly French, and it is owing to this lack of patience per haps that she never gives herself time to go into any great extent for book learning. Indeed her brightness and eleverness may be described as congenital, for I have never met an Irish girl who could sit still sufficiently long in one place to enable her to read is no more fantastic than the lovely combination of the second page of a book after having finished th The impersonification of perpetual movement, she invariably reminds me of the Arab tradition with regard to the creation of woman. According to this story Allah had laid down the rib on the ground and was just engaged in sewing up the side of Adam ce He had taken it for the purpose of constructing Eve, when suddenly a stray dog caught sight of the hone, grabbed it and bolted. Allah started off in hot pursuit, but only succeeded in ciatching hold of the animal's tail, which remained in his hand, the dog getting away clear with the bone, which it devoured. Nothing daunted, Allah deter-mined to make the best of a bad job and to use the tail of the thieving dog as a basis for the construction of woman in lieu of Adam's rib. And it is in conequence of this, according to the Arab story, that n find It just as difficult to remain still as doe dog's tail.

One of the only points which the Irish have in commen with their English sisters is in the sterling character and loyalty of their friendships. While the Irish gentleman is often accused of being fickle, no one has ever, that I know of, ventured to accuse the Irish lady thereof, and we have only to read Erin's history. both past and present, in order to realize how full its pages are of records of splendid unselfishness and noble self-sacrificing devotion on the part of Ireland's womenkind.

This being the case, we can, perhaps, Mford to show indulgence to the Irish girls' shortcomings as regards thrift, method and order, all three of which are absolutely foreign to her character. All re-monstrance or protest is useless, and is turned off by her with a savey laugh or a merry jest. Indeed she makes fun of everything and of everybody save the priest, for she is very devont-and with the exception of the Church there is nothing sacred to the dam of Erin. Did not the sauciest and most piquant of all of them that I know, Mrs. Cornwallis West, th daughter of old Lady Ollvia Fitzpatrick, even go so far as to drop a piece of ice down the back of the neck of her coming King one evening after a particularly festive dinner? I am not sure that she would not have pulled faces even at the Queen herself if the fit had taken her, and I well remember the consternation which she caused one day at Cairo at the office of the extremely dignified and imposing Egyptian Prime Minister, Nubar Pacha, when she amused herself by pressing the sixty or seventy electric bell buttons behind his desk, and then greeting all the Pachas Beys and Effendis who hurried to the room in ho haste with peals of laughter and comical faces. still can see Nubar laughingly expostulating arging that she was injuring his prestige, remon trances to which the blond and curly-headed little beauty, the very spirit of merry mischief, responded by informing His Excellency that he was nothing but an old sloner. For any one but an Irish woman, a Parisienne or a Viennese grande dame to have acted thus would have exposed her to charges of vulgarity The latter, however, is the one thing which no Irish woman of gentle birth ever can be-at least in my experience.

Nothing is more amusing than to hear Mrs. Wes engage in a wordy conflict with her huge husband, who, in addition to his slowness of mind, possesses the additional drawback of slowness of speeca, since he stammers dreadfully, especially when his wife is in a barry to obtain an answer from him to her questions. Mrs. West's sister Joanna, the widow, presents in every way the most striking contrast to party at their house, No. 374 Fiftheave, last night. There were at the dinner twenty people, including the host and hostess. The party included Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Baylies, Mr. and Mrs. R. de Koven, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newbold, Miss Willing, Miss Grace Wilson, Miss Beatrice Bend, Miss Willing, Miss Grace Wilson, Miss Beatrice Bend, Miss Wiltier, J. Wadsworth Ritche, Hamilton Carey, Reginald Ronalds, Center Hitchcock and Herbert Robbins.

STAMPS FOR THE TEN CENT TAX.

At the mouthly meeting of the trustees of the Actars' Find, held at the rooms of the fund, in Twenty-eighthest, yesterday afternoon, the committee appointed to rounder the proposed tax of ten cents each on theatre prases for the benefit of the fund made a report. The committee consists of A. L. Hayman, Daniel Frohman end M. W. Hanley. It recommended that the Actors' Fund should leave stamps to the theatres, which should be attached to his paid for and those not used returned. When a stamp to used on a pass the receiver of it will, of course, be required to pay ten cents for it. The final considerable fame both in London and Dublin as Miss Armytage Moore. She is both musical and possesses a a strongly developed talent for amateur acting, and both at Castlewellan in Ireland and at Annesley Lodge, in London, has of late given numerous most successful to the annual meeting of the fund, to be held at the Madison Square Theatre on June 5. the former, and it is difficult to detect any trace of the Irish an Asiatic origin. It is said that they are descended from the ancient Phoenicians, and certainly their women possess many graces and qualities both of mind and of body which are to be found developed in a far higher degree in the Orient than in the Decident. As I stated above, the Irish women are, however, thoroughly un-Oriental both in their loyalty, their intelligence and in their high regard for morality.

THE SENTIMENTAL MUSLIN.

WHERE IS THE BLUE-RIBBONED GUITART One of the most popular fabrics of the hour for summer afternoon dress is the pin-dotted mu is the picturesque Swiss muslin gown worn by the sentimental woman of 1830—a gown which has evoked rhapsodies from easily moved versifiers. There is no doubt that this sheer muslin is generally becoming. scribed last week in these columns, and with simply two ruffles on the bottom of the skirt. The bodices are invariably full, round, and finished with girdles and close rosettes of ribbon. Where the fastening of the bodice is not completely concealed, tiny rosettes of ribbon are placed down the front of the dress.

The surplice bodice is a very popular style for dot-ted muslin and organdles. These dresses display the throat and a band of dark velvet ribbon, like the old-time dog-collar, is worn about the throat. The sleeves are very full and sugging, and are sometimes caught up in graceful folds by one or two knots of ribbon. Sometimes they reach to the wrist; but more often they are merely elbow sleeves. Many of the new pin-dotted muslins are in color pale blue, dell cate pink or lavender, with large bouquess of roses and other flowers figuring them in harmonizing shades such mustles may be worn over slip skirts and waists of silk, which are entirely separate. The very thin nest and lightest quality of taffeta sfik is chosen. In the shops these dresses are often made up in con-junction with silk, so that they cannot be laundered: and the cost of a simple muslin dress in such a case may be $60 or $75. Organdie muslins are quite generally made up over silk linings, but the arrange ment is much better when the slik is entirely separate from the muslin, so that the muslin dress may be laundered when necessary. Knots of dark velvet ribbon, as well as of satin and moire, are used with organdle muslin. The sheerer point d'esprit lace is ed with organdle better than the heavier Genoa and Russian laces.

WORTH'S COLORINGS.

A SPRING-LIKE GOWN.

M. Worth uses sometimes combinations of color which at first sight astonish, if they do not frighten, his fair customers. A longer look and they seem rather fascinating than otherwise, and at last the happy owner of what at first seems so bizarre comes to the conclusion that nothing could be more delightful. Perhaps the secret of the beauty of apparently incongruous colorings might be explained by a little study of nature. There are color mixtures in flowers which seem absurdly "inartistic" when talked about, yet which are Leautifully barmonious when seen. Here is a costume in an odd mixture of colors essentially French. It is of pistache green sicilienne, the corsage butfoned at the side and having revers of sky-blue velvet embroidered with gold. The puffed sleeves are of the gold-embroidered velvet. The girdle and small plastron are of plain sky-blue velvet. It is a spring-like dress and prettier than one can guess from the description. A little reflection is enough to convince the reader that this blue and green coloring the forget-me-not and its leaves.

A graceful gown of white canvas has a fine slik stripe. The yoke is of pale heliotrope slik, covered with creamy guipure, and the lower part of the sleeve matches. The epaulettes, girdle and drapery across the bust are of heliotrope slik. The popularity of the violet, Illac, petunia and heliotrope shades continues despite the fact that they are not universally becoming. One shade of color, by the way, is becoming to almost all complexions, whether light or dark. This is the soft old rose-one of the most beautiful colors ever used in stuffs.

THE TEST OF THE GEARY LAW.

THE PART OF WISDOM TO GO SLOW. From The Philadelphia Ledger. From The Philadelphia Ledger.
Chinamen, though amergistered, and, therefore, not legally allowed to reside in this country after Friday next, are not to be disturbed until the constitutionality of the Exclusion law is tested before the supreme Court. Grave doubts exist on the point, and it is, therefore, very wise to refrain from putting into execution a law which would certainly causemany hardships and might possibly cause the Government to be placed in a very awkward position in its relations with a friendly Power.

STAKING MUCH ON THE DECISION. From The New York Sun.

From The New York Sun.

But how if the Supreme Court of the United States decides against them? That chance apparently they have not taken into the account. And their course does not seem to be due to the easy-going philosophy that refrains from worrying about crossing a river until the river is renched; it looks more like the policy of burning the ships behind them. Those who are without certificates by to-morrow night will have staked a great deal on the decision of the supreme Court.

HOW ARE THE BILLS TO BE FOOTED!

HOW ARE IME BILLS TO BE FOOTED?
From The Washington Post.
Should the Geary Exclusion act be declared constitutional by the Supreme Court, all the unregistered Chinamen in the United States, to the number of 100,000 or more, will be subject to immediate deportation. As only $100,000 was appropriated in the first instance for carrying out the provisions of the law, and as less than half of this sum will be available for deportation purposes, it becomes a question of some interest to know where the money is coming from to pay 100,000 fares from San Francisco at $35 a head, or any considerable number from Paget Sound at $5.5 a head. If no more than 50,000 are to be shipped out at the lowest rate, it will cost $1.750,000, and as there is no contingent fund to draw on and the Chinamen can't walk home, how are the bills to be footed?

THE CHINESE NOT WITHOUT ADVISERS.

THE CHINESE NOT WITHOUT ADVISERS.

The Chiases SOI Williot Advisers.

There can be little doubt that the Chinese in America are receiving the best possible advice to secure the conservation of such few liberties as they possess here, and the recognition that they have grievances to be removed and rights to be acknowledged. A PROMPT ADJUDICATION DESIRABLE.

From The Philadelphia Telegraph. The important factor of the situation is that the law puts it in the power of the enemies of the Chinese to force them into conflict with the United States authorities and to forward summary proceedings against them, pending final tests of the validity of the legislation under which prosecution can be pursued, and it is therefore of special importance that the test case above referred to be adjudicated as promptly as possible.

IT WILL BE A SERIOUS UNDERTAKING. From The Springfield Republican.

Only a few hundred out of the many thousands of Chinese in this country have registered, and the arrest, trial and deportation of the others is going to be a serious undertaking, if it has to be done.
